Introduction

The Canadian Research Index - Microlog puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. Canadian Research Index in print is a monthly indexing and abstracting service. An electronic version on CD-ROM or via the Internet is also available. Microlog represents our fulltext document service. Most titles included in Canadian Research Index are available in paper as well as microfiche format. Together, these services are a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications.

The Canadian Research Index includes scientific and technical research papers in physical, natural and social sciences. It also includes policy papers, important statistical publications, and annual reports.

Documents issued in English or French are catalogued, indexed and abstracted in the language of the publication, while bilingual documents are catalogued, indexed and abstracted in both languages.

Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by the Microlog Service approximately two months after publication of the list.

SOURCES

- government publications from the federal, provincial and municipal levels
- depository publications of reference value
- non-depository publications issued by government organizations, laboratories and research centres
- non-profit organizations, educational institutions and research groups
- some monographs and serials issued by Statistics Canada

ORGANIZATION

Canadian Research Index comprises the following sections:

Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.

Corporate name index: Access by controlled format corporate names based on Canadian Authorities.

Personal name index: Access by personal name.

Subject index: Subject terms based on Library of Congress and Canadian Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.

Series titles: Lists by title and numbers all reports in a series; series are available as an on-going subscription or retrospective collection.

Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions.

ELECTRONIC ACCESS

The full Canadian Research Index file from 1982 to date is available in electronic formats on the SilverPlatter SPIRS platform. It is accessible on CD; it may be licensed for network use on a local server or on a SilverPlatter ERL server; and it is available for Internet subscription. Reports may be ordered through the National Technical Information Service in the U.S.A., or directly through Micromedia's Technical Information Centre. All catalogued documents issued by Statistics Canada are now included in electronic versions of Canadian Research Index. For information, contact Micromedia's CD Centre at 1-800-387-2689.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document. Most documents cited in Canadian Research Index are available as part of the Microlog Microfiche Subscription Service, institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in the Index. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprints may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

Introduction

Microlog : Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. L'Index de recherche du Canada imprimé est un service mensuel d'indexation et de résumés. Une version électronique est également offerte sur CD-ROM ou dans Internet. Microlog représente notre service de documents en texte intégral. La plupart des titres figurant dans l'Index sont disponibles sous forme imprimée et sur microfiche. Ces services combinés constituent un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada.

L'Index contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels.

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

De vastes efforts sont déployés pour assurer la pertinence de l'index. Par exemple, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

SOURCES

- publications fédérales, provinciales et municipales
- publications déposées servant de référence
- publications non déposées publiées par les organismes gouvernementaux, les laboratoires et les centres de recherche
- publications d'organismes à but non lucratif, d'établissements d'enseignement et de groupes de recherche
- certaines monographies et publication en série publiées par Statistique Canada

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.

Index des dénominations sociales: donne un accès par dénominations sociales fondées sur les vedettes d'autorité du service Canadiana.

Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur.

Index des matières: des descripteurs fondés sur les vedettes matières des documents Library of Congress Subject Headings et Canadian Subject Headings sont associés à chaque publication; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.

Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces documents sont disponibles par le biais d'un abonnement permanent et ils sont aussi intégrés à une collection rétrospective.

Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés.

ACCÈS ÉLECTRONIQUE

Le fichier complet de l'Index de recherche du Canada, de 1982 à aujourd'hui, est disponible sous forme électronique à partir de la plate-forme SilverPlatter SPIRS. Il est offert sur CD-ROM et il est possible d'obtenir des licences d'utilisation en réseau pour un serveur local ou pour un serveur SilverPlatter ERL. Il est également disponible par le biais d'un abonnement Internet. Les rapports peuvent être commandés par l'intermédiaire du National Technical Information Service aux États-Unis ou encore directement au Centre d'information technique de Micromedia. Tous les documents catalogués publiés par Statistique Canada sont intégrés dans les versions électroniques de l'Index de recherche du Canada. Pour plus de détails, contactez le personnel de Micromedia au 1 800 387-2689.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

Le numéro d'accès unique de Microlog est la clé qui permet de repérer immédiatement tout document. La majorité des documents cités dans l'Index de recherche du Canada sont offerts par le service d'abonnement aux microfiches de Microlog. Les organismes peuvent s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de l'Index. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

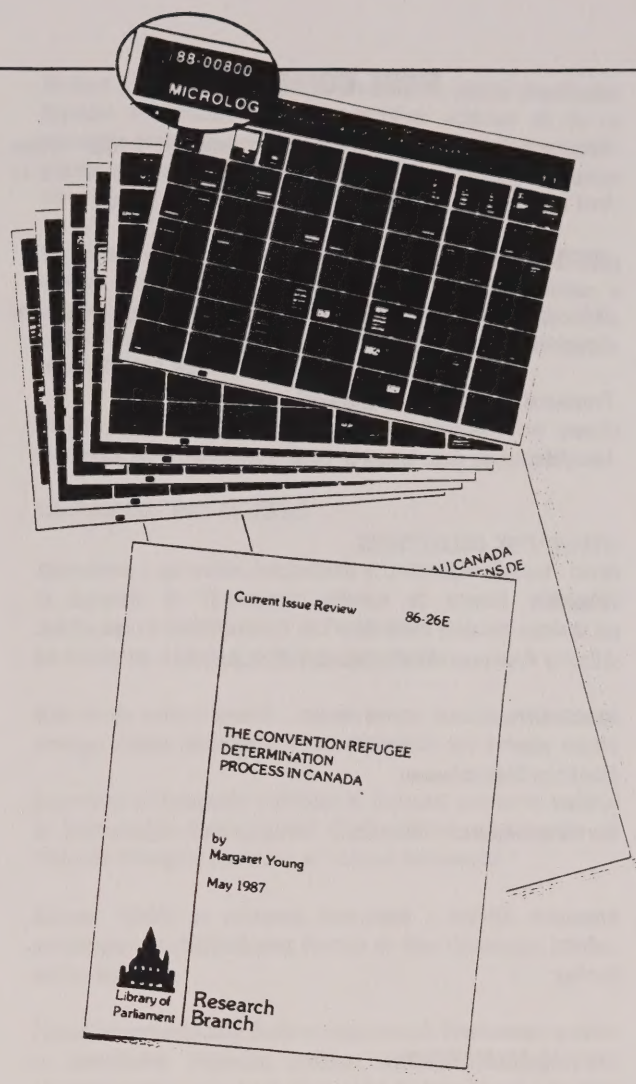

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1987 Big Club Lake aurora trout creel

By D. Critchlow and D. Fillatrault. Timmins, ON : Ministry of Natural Resources, Timmins District, 1988. 17 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02089 (1 fiche)

Describes and presents results of a voluntary creel census conducted on Big Club Lake in Timmins District during the 1987 aurora trout season. The aurora trout, a unique stock of brook trout (Salvelinus fontinalis), only exists in Ontario via artificially maintained stocks. One stocking site is Big Club Lake, and the aurora trout is the only sport fish in the lake. The creel census monitored trout harvest, fishing effort, and fishing success. Results are compared to those from the 1986 survey. A copy of the survey questionnaire is included.

MICROLOG 97-02090 (1 fiche)

Describes and presents results of an access point creel survey conducted on Flack Lake, located 32 kilometres north of Elliot Lake, Ontario. The survey was stratified by season (spring and summer 1987). Species harvested at the Lake included lake trout, smallmouth bass, rock bass, and lake whitefish. The creel census monitored the observed and estimated catch, fishing effort, and fishing success. Investigators also sampled as many lake trout as possible for biological data including length, weight and age.

MICROLOG 97-02136 (1 fiche)

Describes and presents results of a voluntary creel census conducted on Big Club Lake in Timmins District during the 1988 aurora trout season. The aurora trout, a unique stock of brook trout (Salvelinus fontinalis), only exists in Ontario via artificially maintained stocks. One stocking site is Big Club Lake, and the aurora trout is the only sport fish in the lake. The creel census monitored trout harvest, fishing effort, and fishing success. Results are compared to those from 1986 and 1987 surveys.

The Lake Simcoe angler diary program is an attempt to collect catch, effort, and fish attribute data by an alternative approach to the standard fishing survey. This report describes the diary program and results from a summer 1989 survey of lake trout, in which four charter boat operators and three anglers submitted diaries. Program participants were asked to check for and record fin clips; sample their catch for total length, fork length, weight, and sex; collect scale samples; record fishing start and stop times, weather conditions, sectors fished, and bottom depth and depth of capture for fish caught. Pooled results are presented. A sample copy of the diary is included.

MICROLOG 97-02104 (2 fiche)

The Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources conducts a survey of recreational fishing in the province every five years to gather information on the nature and size of the recreational fishery. This report is based on the results of the 1990 survey and includes information on the survey methodology; selected results from the 1980, 1985, and 1990 surveys along with discussion of trends; and tables showing results of the 1990 resident and non-resident recreational fishing surveys. Information collected in the surveys includes numbers of anglers by age, sex, and region of residence; angler effort by region fished and region of residence; number of fish caught, by species and region fished; value of angler expenditures; angler characteristics such as educational level, angling skill, income, fishing practices, and employment status; and type of accommodation used.

Toronto : Ministry of Natural Resources, Fisheries Policy Branch, Client Services Section, 1992. II, 22 p.
MICROLOG 97-02099 (1 fiche)

The 1990 survey is the fourth in a series conducted to gather information on the nature and magnitude of the recreational fishery in Ontario and its importance. As part of the resident angler sample selection process for this survey, inactive anglers and non-anglers were surveyed to collect data that could be compared to the results of the main survey and that would aid in determining the similarities and differences between active anglers and non-anglers. This report details the information collected during the resident sample selection and analyzes angler and non-angler perceptions about how various activities impact on the fisheries resource. Topics covered include sampling procedures, household composition, respondent profiles, and results of the perception survey.

The long-term objective of outboard trawling is to establish an indexing program to assess the relative abundance of small fish in the shallow waters of the lakes; the program should also provide biological information for those small fish. The objectives of the program in 1991 were to determine whether outboard trawling gear could be used effectively in the Kawartha Lakes. The 1991 program consisted of becoming familiar with bottom trawling gear and methods, establishing suitable trawling sites, and conducting exploratory trawls in a variety of habitats to determine abundance and size composition of small fish. Results are presented for about three weeks of trawling. Fish species caught included yellow perch, trout perch, bluegill, pumpkinseed, and walleye.

Alberta's information technology and telecommunications infrastructure : building on our strengths

By Marshall M. Williams. Edmonton : Alberta Premier's Council on Science & Technology, 1995. xi, 67 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02192 (1 fiche)

Examines the development of Alberta's information infrastructure by evaluating its strengths and weaknesses, pointing to other jurisdictions that may serve as models for Alberta, and proposing a strategy to ensure the competitive position of the province. Study methodology included interviews with representatives and professionals in telecommunications and information technology, as well as an extensive literature search. Future needs are discussed in the categories of government leadership, co-ordination and co-operation for infrastructure development, and accountability. Finally, an action plan is outlined with goals of creating a culture of information technology use, ensuring that necessary tools are available, and creating opportunity to add value. The appendix includes a review of current information technology and telecommunications activities in Alberta.

Alcohol use among drivers and pedestrians fatally injured in motor vehicle accidents : Canada, 1994

By D.R. Mayhew, H.M. Simpson and S.W. Brown. Ottawa : Transport Canada, Road Safety, 1996. vi, 188 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02165 (3 fiche)

This report describes the conduct of a project to compile data on alcohol use by persons fatally injured in motor vehicle accidents occurring on or off public highways in Canada. Data are obtained from police-reported information on the characteristics of the victim and details of the fatal motor accident; and coroners' and medical examiners' files for objective, toxicological data from body fluid samples. The focus of the report is on alcohol in fatally injured drivers with a secondary focus on alcohol in fatally injured pedestrians. The report contains general descriptive information on the frequency and quantity of alcohol found in drivers and pedestrians fatally injured in motor vehicle collisions and trends in alcohol detected among fatally injured operators of automobiles, motorcycles, trucks, vans, and tractor-trailers and among fatally injured pedestrians. Data on alcohol use by drivers are presented separately for each province and territory. An historical overview of the Fatality Database Project and a description of the project design are provided in an appendix. Statistics are provided in tabular and graphical formats.

DNA analysis is being used to determine the genetic structure of Arctic beluga whale stocks. This paper describes the use of the polymerase chain reaction (PCR) to amplify mitochondrial DNA, asymmetric PCR to produce single stranded DNA, and sequencing using the dideoxynucleotide chain termination method. The mitochondrial DNA control region sequence is presented for the beluga and is compared to that of the dolphin, fin whale, killer whale, and minke whale. Variant sites found in routine sequencing of a 235 basepair region of the L-strand left domain are shown to illustrate the type and location of variant sites.

Consumer expectations for the golf market, the existing golf market in New Brunswick and neighbouring provinces, and the competition faced by the province in regard to golf tourism are evaluated. The existing golf courses in the province are rated for their tourism potential and suggestions are made for improvements. Strategic directions are then proposed, including increasing market appeal, establishing clusters of golf destinations, co-operative efforts, special events, and developing golf trails. Potential economic benefits of implementing the proposed strategy are also discussed. The appendix includes golf market data and a list of New Brunswick golf courses.

The main objectives of this study were to document wood fibre flows within the Vancouver Forest Region and to profile the Region's wood processing facilities. As part of the study, a database was created detailing fibre production and utilization of all the major forest product companies operating in the Region by tenure type, species, industrial sort, and sub-region. Regional fibre flow is summarized first, followed by information on fibre flows in the central coast, Vancouver Island, lower mainland, and Queen Charlotte Islands. This information has been consolidated to form the fibre flow charts presented in this report. The study also demonstrates how the data could be used to improve the assessment of employment impacts of hypothesized timber harvest reductions.

Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. v, 87 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-4835-X
MICROLOG 97-01990 (1 fiche)

The potential for contamination of surface water by scrap tires is a concern because tires have been proposed for use as artificial reefs and floating breakwalls in lakes and rivers. The study described in this report investigated the release of chemical substances from tires, and their toxicity to aquatic organisms. In tests designed to simulate field conditions. Two groups of tires were tested: one gathered from an artificial reef and from a tire trench site in contact with groundwater, and another group of recently discarded tires that had not had contact with an aquatic environment. Tests included placing tires in flowing water for several months and periodically collecting water samples for trout lethality tests; and comparing toxicity of non-flowing water exposed to groups of tires that had had different exposure periods to an aquatic environment. Efforts were also made to identify the toxic substances released into the water from the tires.

Benthic macroinvertebrate communities and water quality of headwater streams of the Oak Ridges Moraine : reference conditions

By Stephen H. Maude and Joanne Di Majo. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. vi, 29 p. : Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-5930-0
MICROLOG 97-02455 (1 fiche)

Describes a water quality survey of 28 sites from relatively undisturbed headwater streams of the Oak Ridges Moraine in southern Ontario. The survey comprised collection of physical, chemical, and biological data, with emphasis on rapid bioassessment of benthic macroinvertebrate communities. Sites sampled were typically small, cold, well-oxygenated, spring-fed headwater streams that supported diverse assemblages of benthic macroinvertebrates, including a number of sensitive taxa. Data from the survey were used to derive a set of proposed reference values for important chemical and biological indicator parameters. In addition, the approach of Novak and Bode (1992) was used to develop a preliminary Oak Ridges Moraine model community based on the composition of the benthic macroinvertebrate communities from the 28 reference sites.

Challenging responses to changing times : new proposals for occupational regulation

St. John's : Government of Newfoundland & Labrador, 1996. 36 p. MICROLOG 97-02219 (1 fiche)

As occupations grew and practitioners began to deliver services in Newfoundland, statutory frameworks were established to regulate occupations. This paper highlights the need to reconsider these statutory frameworks and the procedures which they have put into place. It begins with proposals to replace the existing statutory hodgepodge with rational, comprehensive, and consistent practices and procedures. Chapter 2 discusses the process used to determine whether, and what kind of, regulation might be necessary, proceeding on the premise that occupations already self-governing should be allowed to operate freely as long as the public is protected. Chapter 3 suggests changes to promote public accountability to ensure the public has access to information about the self-governing occupations. Chapter 4 outlines a new disciplinary model and proposes the creation of a uniform disciplinary board.

Chemical studies of organic trace metal supplements : final report

By R.S. Reid and M.A. Attaielmann. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1996. 34 p. : Ill. MICROLOG 97-01943 (1 fiche)

Ruminant dietary metal deficiencies are traditionally corrected by supplementing the diet with inorganic salts. Chelated minerals containing metals bound to a binding agent or ligand have recently been marketed as better alternatives. The project reported in this document explored the supposed chemical basis for the action of chelated minerals to help assess whether the substantial additional costs involved are justified. Chelated minerals are thought to be more bioavailable as they are presumed to be stable and could therefore be absorbed intact. Studies focused on the copper-lysine chelate. Likely binding sites on the animal were identified, strengths of the various binding interactions were measured, and computer predictions of copper distribution were then made. Direct observation of this distribution was performed using nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy. Results indicate the relation between final copper distribution and the means of copper administration.

Ce rapport de consultation se divise en quatre parties. Les deux premières laissent la parole à la centaine de parents qui ont bien voulu rencontrer des représentants du Conseil de la famille et discuter avec eux du bien-fondé d'une éventuelle politique des services à la petite enfance. Nous y retrouvons, d'une part, leurs constatations et, d'autre part, ce qu'ils exigent pour le bien-être de leurs enfants. Par la suite, le document rend compte de l'opinion des porte-parole d'une vingtaine de regroupements familiaux qui ont accepté de se pencher sur le même sujet.

Choosing higher densities : survey of Metro's family condo owners

Toronto : Metropolitan Toronto Planning Dept., Research Division, 1994. 73 p. : Ill. On cover: Metro Toronto Housing Needs Study. MICROLOG 97-02127 (1 fiche)

Provides information on the characteristics, housing preferences, and satisfaction of owner-occupant families (with children) in apartment condominiums in Metro Toronto. Information comes from a telephone survey conducted in December 1992. Results from interviews with 86 family owner-occupants in 41 buildings in the Metro suburbs are compared with those of 149 families owning houses in the same areas. Implications of the survey results for a broader understanding of housing in Metro are discussed with reference to: identifying the potential market, design issues, price and location, and neighbourhood character and amenity.

Presents coal data from samples obtained from outcrops, mine sites, old mine workings, and well cuttings collected over an approximately 22,000 square kilometre area of southern Alberta. Information provided includes sample locality, sample type, sample number, vitrinite reflectance data (maximum reflectance value, standard deviation, number of measurements taken), and coal rank derived from vitrinite reflectance levels. The data were compiled as part of regional studies of coal rank distribution in the Rocky Mountain Front Ranges and Foothills, and have also been used for evaluation of maturation levels in potential source rocks in the adjacent foreland basin and to assess coalbed methane potential of the coal measures.

The Forest Practices Code of British Columbia brings into effect new restrictions on forestry and range practices in community watersheds, defined by three criteria: the water source is from a stream where the water is used for human consumption; the stream is licensed for a waterworks or domestic purpose; and the drainage area is not over 500 square kilometres. This guide provides recommended procedures for forest operations in designated community watersheds, and explains resource development practices that are intended to prevent long-term change to background water quality, quantity, and timing of flow. Sections of the guide cover watershed classification and mapping, community watershed planning, water quality monitoring, riparian management, terrain hazard mapping and field assessment, harvest scheduling and cutblock size, forest road engineering, range management, forest fire protection and suppression, forest fertilizer management, pesticide management, recreation access and activities, and spring source areas.

In October 1996, the Ontario government introduced the Fewer Politicians Act, which would replace the electoral boundaries of the existing 130 ridings represented in the Legislature with the new electoral boundaries of the 103 Ontario seats in the House of Commons. This paper compares these two sets of electoral boundaries. It describes how the boundaries of each provincial riding would be affected if they were replaced by the boundaries of the relevant federal riding or ridings. The descriptions are presented by region (northern Ontario, eastern Ontario, the Niagara-Golden Horseshoe region, Metropolitan Toronto, and western Ontario).

This note examines the economic consequences of expanding the use of alternative silvicultural systems featuring natural regeneration as one component of an ecosystem management strategy. Such a strategy is in contrast to a sustained yield management strategy similar to that practised during the last decade in Seine River Forest, Ontario. The examination uses a modified version of the HSG (Harvest Scheduled Generator) software developed to schedule stands for clear-cutting in even-aged forests. A computer simulation was applied to the Seine River Forest to explore two general strategies: sustained yield management and ecosystem management. The former strategy used the clear-cutting system exclusively. Simulation results presented include economic indicators such as volume and area cut, residual timber value, and timber operating costs.

Confidence building as an approach to international security management has traditionally focused on developing agreements featuring well-known confidence building measures, as opposed to the activity of confidence building itself. This report begins with a critical review of traditional confidence building ideas which highlights some problems that continue to undermine conventional treatments of confidence building. It then discusses in some detail the essential elements that comprise the transformation view of confidence building. That view shifts attention away from operational measures towards the processes associated with their development and application. According to that view, confidence building is a distinct activity undertaken by policy makers with the minimum intention of improving some aspects of a traditionally antagonistic security relationship through security policy co-ordination and co-operation. It requires interaction among officials and experts from participating states when conditions are supportive of change.

After a brief description of the TSA area, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the area and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the existing forest inventory, the expected rate of forest growth, the land base contributing to timber harvesting, regeneration delay, areas not satisfactorily restocked, silvicultural systems, decay and wastage, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, dependence on the forest industry, and economic and social objectives. Dilemmas in matching policies to changing families : Canada and the United States of America

By Margrit Elchier. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1991. 43 p. : Bibl. (OISE project / Ontario Institute for Studies in Education : 3069) ONTERIS ON08414 MICROLOG 97-02291 (1 fiche)

Begins with a review of demographics of families in the United States and Canada, showing structural changes that have occurred over the past several decades. These changes include reduced fertility rates, ageing of the population, declining marriage rates, and increases in divorce rates and in the labour force participation of women. The consequences resulting from these changes (alterations in kinship structures, household distribution, non-congruity of family and household memberships) are discussed along with the relevance of family structures for the incidence of poverty. Concludes with an examination of some of the policy dilemmas that can be identified as a result of the interaction of the various changes discussed.

Il s'intéresse tout particulièrement aux enfants qui évoluent dans une classe normale, même si dans certains cas ils peuvent avoir besoin d'un soutien additionnel. Il fait aussi un survol des études les plus connues dans le domaine et explique ce qui a réussi pour certaines écoles, tout en encourageant l'enseignant ou l'enseignante à faire d'autres lectures sur le sujet. Il fournit enfin un bref résumé des travaux des principaux spécialistes et de leurs modèles. Son contenu s'inspire en grande partie des entrevues que nous ont données les éducatrices et les éducateurs qui ont répondu à la demande d'information que nous avons fait paraître dans le bulletin et le Newsletter de l'ACE. This information note examines some effective measures being used for students who display disruptive or inappropriate behaviour in class. It focuses mainly on students who are in a regular classroom; some may receive additional support services. The purpose is to provide an overview of popular research, describe what works for some educators, and guide teachers to further reading on this topic. The document reviews the effects of disruptive behaviour, the factors contributing to such behaviour, the characteristics of well-disciplined schools, and factors involved in successful discipline. Examples and suggestions are provided of how to make changes in a school to foster good discipline and manage classrooms. The issue of segregating students because of their behaviour is also discussed. The final section describes a program called Reflection which was successful at improving discipline at a Quebec school.

Dans ce document, nous traitons plus en profondeur de la question importante suivante : les subventions généralement accessibles, si elles ont un important impact environnemental, devraient-elles être soumises à de tels droits? La question repose sur le principe fondamental de l'application d'un instrument commercial en vue de favoriser la modification des pratiques de subventionnement qui ont des effets néfastes sur l'environnement et touchent un bien commercialisable.

As part of a transportation study of the Metro Toronto east waterfront area, this report analyzes development opportunities in the area, focusing on the Kingston Road corridor. Such an analysis is necessary to provide preliminary estimates of population and employment generation resulting from development for traffic modelling purposes. The analysis begins with an overview of the bottom-up study approach, then examines the types of existing development in the corridor and estimates the potential for new development. Some analysis of development potential outside the corridor focuses on existing development applications or initiatives and emerging policies that will affect future development. The analysis then reviews broader demand-side trends that will influence any potential development and reviews the impacts that various policy initiatives could have, specifically the impacts on housing opportunities, main street housing, and employment uses.

Les aménagements aux îles de Varennes sont jeunes et seuls les effets à court terme ont pu être évalués. Avec les années, les prairies abandonnées deviendront des vrais abandons et les CND (couverts denses de nidification) seront mieux établis. Les aménagements seront alors davantage bénéfiques aux passereaux. L'objectif de cette étude était d'évaluer l'effet des aménagements effectués aux îles de Varennes sur l'abondance des passereaux. Cette étude fait suite à des études sur les effets du confinement du bétail et des travaux d'ensemencement sur le couvert végétal et la nidification des canards. Plus spécifiquement, nos objectifs étaient de comparer l'abondance des passereaux avant et après la réalisation des aménagements et de comparer l'utilisation des différents traitements par les oiseaux.

Ce rapport d'enquête s'inscrit dans le cadre du mandat de révision globale de l'intervention ministérielle en diffusion des arts de la scène. Il vise à documenter le ministère, ses partenaires et ses clientèles sur l'apport des municipalités et des institutions d'enseignement à la diffusion des arts de la scène au Québec en 1993-1994 et 1994-1995. Il comprend une analyse descriptive des formes de contribution des municipalités et des institutions d'enseignement selon la catégorie d'organismes de diffusion, la taille des municipalités, l'ordre d'enseignement dispensé des institutions d'enseignement et les régions de l'Est-du-Québec et de l'Ouest-du-Québec. Son objectif central est de dégager les similitudes et les différences du comportement des municipalités et des institutions d'enseignement à l'égard des organismes de diffusion des arts de la scène au Québec.

Devant l'échec de l'interventionnisme économique à la fin des années 1980, les Argentins ont généralement reconnu la supériorité de l'économie de marché. Sous la direction du président Menem, l'Argentine a procédé à une libéralisation en profondeur de son économie grâce à laquelle elle possède aujourd'hui l'un des régimes les plus avancés de l'Amérique du Sud en matière de politique économique et commerciale. Ce document porte précisément sur l'Argentine, le Brésil et l'ALENA. Les points qui y sont abordés sont les suivants : un marathon d'obstacles; la politique économique en Argentine et au Brésil; l'impact des politiques économiques sur le MERCOSUR; le Brésil de nouveau à l'oeuvre; l'opinion de l'ALENA pour l'Argentine; l'intégration économique avec les pays membres de l'ALENA; les obligations de l'Argentine au sein du MERCOSUR et son éventuelle accession à l'ALENA; et, le jeu en vaut-il la chandelle?

Environmental impact assessment, Trans-Canada Highway, Fredericton to Salisbury : component study report, acid-generating minerals/erodible soils

Washburn & Gillis Associates. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1995. III, 98 p. : Ill., Maps, Bibl.

MICROLOG 97-02238 (2 fiche)

Begins with a discussion of the geology of the area underlying the proposed upgraded Fredericton-Salisbury Trans-Canada Highway, with regard to the potential for water pollution from acid generating rocks. Proposed measures for mitigating potential environmental effects from acid drainage are also outlined. The subsequent section describes the potential for soil erosion along the highway alignment, the potential impacts from erosion and sedimentation, and proposed measures to mitigate erosion and sedimentation concerns. The appendix contains a report detailing the soils found along the highway route, the corresponding soil erosion indices, and areas of particular concern regarding erosion and sedimentation.

Environmental impact assessment, Trans-Canada Highway, Fredericton to Salisbury : component study report, air quality considerations

Washburn & Gillis Associates. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1995. VI, 41 p. : Maps, Bibl.

MICROLOG 97-02397 (1 fiche)

Presents a study of the ambient air quality within ten kilometres of the proposed new route of the Fredericton to Salisbury Trans-Canada Highway, and of the potential impacts on air quality arising from construction and operation of that route. Includes information on local climatology (climate norms and exceptional conditions) which can affect air quality, as well as details of observed levels of suspended particulates, carbon monoxide, nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide, and ground-level ozone. Potential impacts assessed include those from construction equipment operation, burning of wastes, construction activities, vehicle operations, and highway maintenance. Reductions in amounts of vehicular pollutants due to re-routing of vehicles from the old Trans-Canada to the new highway are taken into account. Measures to be taken to mitigate any potential impacts are also reviewed.

Washburn & Gillis Associates. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1995. vi, 169 p. : Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 97-02243 (2 fiche)

Presents an inventory of watercourses existing along the proposed alignment of the upgraded Fredericton-Salisbury Trans-Canada Highway, and reviews the state of water quality, existing aquatic resources, and fish habitat along the alignment. Potential impacts on water quality and water resources due to construction of the new highway are then evaluated, with reference to habitat displacement and sedimentation at major crossings, acidic drainage, chemical contaminants, fish passage, blasting, construction operations at minor watercourses, and highway operation. Mitigative measures to minimize potential impacts are also discussed.

Washburn & Gillis Associates. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1995. v, 93 p. : Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 97-02241 (1 fiche)

Presents an assessment and inventory of heritage resources along the proposed upgrade of the Trans-Canada Highway between Fredericton and Salisbury. These resources include archaeological sites, historic sites and buildings, and cemeteries. Includes background information on the area's glacial history, human prehistory, and history since European arrival. Individual heritage resources identified along sections of the proposed alignment of the highway are discussed and their importance evaluated, and possible impacts on these resources from highway construction are noted.

Environmental impact assessment, Trans-Canada Highway, Fredericton to Salisbury : component study report, Grand Lake Meadows wetland

Washburn & Gillis Associates. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1996. xxi, 241 p. : Maps, Bibl. MICROLOG 97-02284 (3 fiche)

As part of a larger re-routing of the Trans-Canada Highway between Fredericton and Salisbury, it is proposed to construct part of the new highway within the eastern part of Grand Lake Meadows. The new route through the Meadows would consist of about 5 kilometres of elevated roadway and 1 kilometre of bridge structure crossing the Jemseg River. This document reviews the highway project in the Grand Lake Meadows area and describes the environment of the Meadows and the functions of the components of that environment. The description covers hydrological and biogeochemical values, habitat, ecological values, social/cultural functions and values, and wetland production functions and values. The document then assesses the potential impacts on the Meadows from the construction and operation of the new highway, as well as mitigative measures proposed to minimize those impacts. The appendix includes results of vegetation and bird surveys conducted in the Meadows.

Describes the topography, geology, hydrogeology, and groundwater resources along the proposed route of the upgraded Fredericton-Salisbury Trans-Canada Highway. Information is included on surficial geology, relevant aspects of bedrock geology, valley fill and sedimentary bedrock hydrogeology, and public and private water supplies. The potential impacts on groundwater from construction and operation of the new highway are then assessed, including impacts on water quality from contamination or accidental spills, and impacts on water quantity from dewatering or alteration of rock fracture patterns. Mitigative strategies for minimizing those impacts are discussed.

The proposed upgrade of the Fredericton-Salisbury Trans-Canada Highway includes a portion crossing the Saint John River and its flood plain from Gagetown to Upper Gagetown. This report describes a study conducted to determine if the proposed bridges, structures, and connecting highways in that portion will cause significant changes to the characteristics of flooding and to the distribution of flow in the river from Upper Mauderville to the Gagetown ferry crossing. The study updated previous flood frequency analyses using new data and employed a two-dimensional hydrodynamic model to assess the potential impacts of the proposed highway alignment. Field surveys to provide suitable model input and calibration included collection of information on river system physical characteristics and flood conditions. Potential hydrotechnical impacts were evaluated for a range of flood events covering a range of flood peaks and runoff volume.

Prepared by: Flander-Good Associates Ltd. ; in association with: Washburn & Gillis Associates Ltd. Fredericton : Dept. of Transportation, 1995. ii, 86 p. : Maps MICROLOG 97-02246 (1 fiche)

Describes investigations undertaken to determine existing ambient noise levels at various sites along the proposed alignment of an upgraded Trans-Canada Highway between Fredericton and Salisbury. Fifteen noise-sensitive residential areas were selected as sites for the noise measurements, and results are presented. Some of the sites are currently affected by traffic noise and some are not, which will enable both negative impacts (increases in noise from the new highway) and positive impacts (decreases in noise due to traffic being re-routed to the new highway) to be identified. Impacts from both construction noise and traffic noise are discussed, along with possible measures to mitigate noise impacts. The methods used to model and predict the noise from the new highway are also reviewed.

This study evaluates three alternative corridors for the proposed upgrading of the Trans-Canada Highway between Coles Island and Salisbury, New Brunswick. Route alignments in each corridor were developed which encountered the fewest negative environmental factors. Comparative evaluations of the three alternatives are presented with regard to engineering considerations (interchanges, grade separations, river crossings, road cut-offs), buildings and other structures affected, construction criteria and costs, the impacts on cultural resources, wildlife, and agriculture, and impacts on forest and fishery resources. A preferred alternative was then selected and analyzed to fine tune the alignment and minimize impacts.

Certaines pratiques sylvoles impliquent le prélèvement d'un volume ligneux déterminé dans un peuplement forestier. Le prélèvement périodique des arbres affaiblis, canés ou instables améliore la qualité des peuplements en favorisant la croissance des arbres d'avenir. Le but des pratiques est d'optimiser le rendement à l'hectare des peuplements forestiers en vue d'augmenter des volumes de bois destinés au sciage ou au déroulage. Dans le cas des éclaircies, des coupes progressives ou du jardinage, le sylviculteur doit faire le meilleur choix en procédant au martelage des arbres qui sont déclassés en raison de défauts. Cela présuppose une connaissance de leur état de santé. Dans ce document on a pu colliger des informations, valider sur le terrain la qualité indicatrice des défauts, et produire un guide pratique. On trait de la méthodologie, et des résultats et discussion pour le treillage d'arbres et dissection des troncs (érable à sucre, bouleau jaune, hêtre à grandes feuilles, peupliers, sapin baumier, épinette blanche, érable rouge, et la localisation des défauts sur le tronc).

Estimation of the contribution of phosphorus from on-site sewage disposal systems to lakes

By D.H. Waller, J.D. Mooers and S.C. Sauveur. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1996. vi, 109 p. : Ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02377 (2 fiche)

The objective of this study was to develop a modelling methodology that could be used to more accurately estimate phosphorus loads to lakes from on-site sewage disposal systems. It first reviews approaches that have been used to estimate those loads and explores factors and processes that control phosphorus removal in soils, along with commonly available computer models that have been used to describe them. These reviews led to identification of models that offered the capability of representing the factors and processes involved in phosphorus removal. Sensitivity analyses suggested responses to variations in significant model parameters, and field and laboratory studies provided evidence about possible phosphorus removal under a variety of conditions. Modelling results reported include application of field data from one site to calibrate the unsaturated zone model for phosphorus removal, and application of the calibrated model to other sites. Also included are results of groundwater flow modelling in the saturated zone and a description of continuing work to apply project data to modelling phosphorus movement in the saturated zone.

Financial planning information for establishing a vinifera wine grape planting, Okanagan Region

By George Geldart and John Vielvoye. Victoria : Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries & Food, 1996. 33 p. ISBN 0-7726-2954-4 MICROLOG 97-02322 (1 fiche)

The projections of income and expenses in this document provide a general indication of the financial requirements specifically associated with the establishment and production of vinifera wine grapes in the Okanagan region. The study is based on a ten-acre planted vineyard model developed using a consensus approach with grape producers. A summary of the estimated labour resources is included along with a sensitivity analysis that discusses the impact of price and yield on profitability and accumulated cash flows for the enterprise over a 15-year planning horizon. Financial information for this enterprise is summarized based on the surplus resulting from direct income, minus direct expenses specific to the vineyard. This value provides an indication of the potential contribution of the vineyard enterprise to the overall profitability of the farm business and allows a basis on which to compare various enterprise alternatives. This document presents a summary of Algonquin Park fisheries resource information and management options for public review, after which a fisheries management plan will be developed. It reviews the Park's fisheries resource base, resource use (current and projected sport fishing), current management practices, and problems and issues that must be addressed to meet the demand for sport fishing in the Park. These issues include possible over-exploitation, acid rain, illegal harvesting, proliferation of non-game fish, and gaps in knowledge of fish habitat. Optional management strategies to achieve established targets and to address the identified problems and issues are then presented in a table, showing management tactics or actions along with each strategy. The north-east coast of James Bay was chosen for study in this report because of the development of hydroelectric power on the La Grande River, which brought about some hydrologic changes to the bay coastline. The magnitude of that development indicated the need to gain an in-depth understanding of the ecological relationships between coastal habitats and migratory geese in that area. The study approach was based on the premise that any eventual impacts from development would result from changes in habitats. The study therefore focuses on identifying habitats used by the two different species of geese (Branta canadensis and B. bernicla hrota). Both aerial and ground surveys were conducted to determine patterns of habitat use in spring, summer, and fall, and stomach content analysis was used to establish diet composition and food preferences. Relationships between geese and habitat are identified.

This inventory is a collaborative effort of regional and local municipalities in the GTA, the Urban Development Institute, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing. Conducted in the first quarter of the year, it collects information on the number of lots in active development applications. The aim of the survey is to contribute to a better functioning housing market by providing a comprehensive source of information on the supply of residential lots, which can help identify potential land supply shortages, and foster cooperation between industry and various levels of government on matters affecting the supply of land available for development. This report provides a brief overview of the survey methodology, discusses the outlook for the GTA housing market over the short and medium term, and summarizes the survey results. The outlook includes information on employment, interest rates, affordability, migration and demographics, household formation, and an outlook for housing demand. Regions in the survey include Durham, Halton, Metro, Peel and York.

Guidelines for the handling of naturally occurring radioactive materials (NORM) in western Canada

Western Canadian Committee on Naturally Occurring Radioactive Materials. Edmonton : The Committee, 1995. 207 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02265 (3 fiche)

The largest part of the radiation dose received by the Canadian population arises from naturally occurring radioactive materials (NORM). Jurisdiction for control of NORM rests not with the federal Atomic Energy Control Board but with the individual provinces. This document represents a joint industry/western provincial effort to establish definitive procedures for the control of NORM, and provides guidelines whose basic principle is that the same radiation exposure standards that apply to federally regulated radioactive materials should also apply to NORM. It contains a technical reference manual covering NORM standards, their basis and criteria; detection, assessment, and monitoring of NORM; protection of workers exposed to NORM; transportation of NORM; and environmental protection and waste management. Operational guidelines on the types of NORM found, the potential for worker exposure, and NORM management options are included for the upstream oil and gas industry and the phosphate fertilizer industry. Guidelines for the reurbanisation of Metropolitan Toronto : a draft for discussion Berridge Lewinberg Greenberg Ltd. Toronto : Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, 1991. 64 p. : ill.

MICROLOG 97-02169 (2 fiche)

Projections indicate an increase of 2 million in the Greater Toronto Area population over the next 20-30 years. As most of the area's land is already urbanised, accommodating this increase will require redevelopment, or reurbanisation. To provide a framework to guide this reurbanisation, this document presents a draft set of guidelines developed using a comprehensive approach aimed at integrating environmental, economic, social, and built form issues. The guidelines are organized on the basis of a hierarchy of decisions which will lead the reader through an evaluation process for a reurbanisation area. Each set of guidelines is preceded by an explanation of their context and rationale, and an example showing their application is carried throughout. A fundamental element of the guidelines is strong support for the use of transit through reurbanisation at key locations with appropriate densities and land uses. The guidelines cover: whether an area should be reurbanised; the appropriate mix of uses and overall density level; urban design; public space; site-specific densities; the pedestrian environment; parking; fit and transition; and special features.

As part of Canada Mortgage & Housing's efforts to advance understanding of sustainable housing and sustainable community development, the Corporation undertook a competition to demonstrate that it is possible to design houses for the Canadian climate that are in keeping with sustainability principles, offer occupants a healthy indoor environment, and are affordable. Design teams were invited to submit healthy housing concepts in one of three categories: a newly constructed detached suburban home, an older home retrofit, or an urban infill home. Technical factors to be addressed in the designs were established in five categories: occupant health, energy efficiency, resource efficiency, environmental responsibility, and affordability and economic viability. This document describes the two winning entries, four honourable mentions, and the remaining four finalists in the competition. For each entry, a project description is included along with notes on the project philosophy and vision, project highlights in the five technical categories, selected comments from the competition jury, and some technical details.

Site index is traditionally chosen across North America as a primary measure of forest site quality, as a predictor of tree height growth patterns, and as a predictor of overall height and volume growth rates for forest stands. This technical note presents site index curves (total height versus breast height age) for jack pine, as derived from stem height analysis data from 224 dominant and co-dominant trees sampled in south central, north-east, and north-west Ontario. It also includes site index tables, information on site index model development and instructions for use of the tables.

On y parle de la popularité des jeux de hasard et de l'importance de ceux-ci comme source de revenus pour les gouvernements provinciaux et territoriaux. Le document interprète toute une gamme d'études sur les problèmes associés au jeu et leurs répercussions sociales et financières. Enfin, il souligne le fait que les gouvernements, qui en profitent le plus, en mitigent les pires effets. La recommandation la plus osée de tout le rapport est peut-être la demande d'interdiction des appareils de loterie vidéo à l'extérieur des casinos ou tout autre établissement qui s'y apparente.

Joint timber supply analysis : Grande Alberta Paper Ltd. and Manning Diversified Forest Products Ltd., proposed forest management agreement areas

Timberline Forest Inventory Consultants. Edmonton : Alberta Economic Development & Tourism, Forest Industry Development Division, 1996. 8 p. : ill.
MICROLOG 97-02266 (1 fiche)

Presents details and results of an analysis of timber supply for Grande Alberta Paper's proposed Forest Management Area (FMA) in Forest Management Units (FMUs) P1, P7, P8, and P10; and for Manning Diversified Forest Products Ltd.'s proposed FMA in FMU P6. The analysis addresses questions raised by the companies and by Alberta Land & Forest Services regarding the potential effect on sustainable harvest levels which would result from establishing P6 as a separate FMA for Manning. The analysis was completed using existing forest inventory and yield curve data. An assessment was made of the shift in harvesting between spruce and pine, associated with moving from a combined FMA to separate FMAs for each operator; in addition, timing for accessing FMU P6 within the proposed Grande Alberta FMA was assessed.

Juan de Fuca Provincial Park : background report -- Draft

Victoria : BC Parks, 1996. 28 p. : Bibl., fold. maps
MICROLOG 97-02321 (1 fiche)

Juan de Fuca Provincial Park covers a narrow strip on the south coast of Vancouver Island, eastward for Port Renfrew. This report provides background on the Park's natural and cultural resources (physiography, geology, soils, hydrology, climate, vegetation, fauna, fish resources, outdoor recreation and visual features, cultural sites), land tenure, and recreation opportunities. It then reviews existing use of the Park, use patterns, and trends, and notes the potential for increased use, as well as key issues to be considered in a Park master plan, such as conservation, park role, and level of development.

Kisplox Timber Supply Area : rationale for allowable annual cut (AAC) determination, effective December 30, 1996

By Larry Pedersen. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, 1996. 62 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02388 (1 fiche)

The Kisplox Creek Timber Supply Area (TSA) covers about 1.22 million hectares in north-western British Columbia. About 24% of the TSA area is considered to be the long-term timber harvesting land base. After a brief description of the TSA area, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the area and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the existing forest inventory, the expected rate of forest growth, the land base contributing to timber harvesting, regeneration delay, areas not satisfactorily restocked, silvicultural systems, decay and wastage, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, and timber processing facilities. The appendix contains relevant sections of provincial forestry legislation and a summary of public input to the TSA Timber Supply Review.

The land use policies presented in this document are intended to help Alberta municipalities to harmonize provincial and municipal policy initiatives at the local land-use planning level. Section 1 sets out the purpose of the policies and clarifies the implementation role of the municipalities. Sections 2 and 3 contain policies which are operational in nature and relate to a municipality's general approach to planning and to municipal interaction with residents, applicants, neighbouring municipalities, provincial and federal departments, and other jurisdictions. Sections 4 to 8 contain policies which address specific land use planning issues in which the province and municipalities share a common interest: land use patterns, the natural environment, resource conservation, transportation, and residential development. The appendix contains an excerpt from the provincial sustainable development strategy.

Describes a scoring model designed to assist in setting priorities for forest research. The model evaluates research and development capacity and potential, as well as the ability and likelihood to actually capture benefits. Project evaluators are asked a specific set of questions and required to rank proposed projects relative to each other. The model framework makes explicit, and focuses discussion around, concepts that should be considered when setting priorities. A spreadsheet is used to automate many of the tasks required. Issues arising from an application of the model are outlined, including subjectivity, classifying research, administration costs, and limitations.

À l'heure actuelle, bien que l'on parle de plus en plus des mauvais traitements et de la négligence envers les personnes âgées, cette problématique ne semble pas faire l'objet de beaucoup de recherches. L'objectif premier de cette recension est d'offrir une synthèse critique des travaux empiriques et théoriques portant sur les mauvais traitements et la négligence envers les personnes âgées résidant à domicile. Les sujets abordés touchent la question des définitions des mauvais traitements et de la négligence utilisés dans les études, l'ampleur du problème, les causes probables, les caractéristiques de la victime et de l'agresseur. Cette analyse se veut un outil de référence, qui en raison de ses multiples conclusions et recommandations, permet d'entreprendre de nouvelles recherches à partir d'une base commune de données.

Meeting the challenge of climate change : 1996 update on initiatives in Ontario to reduce greenhouse gas emissions

Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. ii, 41 p. : Ill.
MICROLOG 97-02446 (1 fiche)

Reviews activities in Ontario that will help manage greenhouse gas emissions as part of the national commitment to address the environmental threat posed by greenhouse gases and climate change. Sources of greenhouse gases are summarized along with the principles guiding Ontario's initiatives for managing greenhouse gas emissions. An inventory of Ontario actions which reduce those emissions is then presented, starting with broad-based activities such as the Voluntary Challenge Program and Registry, international co-operation, and government research. Finally, sector-specific activities are reviewed in such areas as municipal government, commercial and residential energy efficiency, transportation, the institutional sector, industry, energy production and supply, and agriculture. Merger control under trade liberalization : convergence or cooperation?

By Nicolas Dimic. Ottawa : External Affairs & International Trade, 1993. 68 p. : Bibl. (Policy staff paper / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; SP27A) (Trade policy series / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; 93/09)

Assesses the impact of trade liberalization, especially the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement (FTA), on merger control and its implications for Canada in light of calls for greater convergence of competition policies. The coherence of Canadian merger control and trade policies is examined in light of the FTA's objective of facilitating conditions of fair competition within the free trade area. The paper begins with a review of merger control in the context of the larger framework of Canadian competition policy. It then identifies potential merger control frictions by comparing Canadian, US, and European Community merger control law and enforcement practices, and explores Canadian interests in the international merger control agenda. It ends with a discussion of the future of merger control.

Merritt Timber Supply Area : rationale for AAC determination, effective January 1, 1996

By Larry Pedersen. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, 1996. 50 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02343 (1 fiche)

The Merritt Timber Supply Area (TSA) covers about 1.12 million hectares in southern interior British Columbia. About 47% of the TSA area is considered to be the current timber harvesting land base. After a brief description of the TSA area, this report reviews the principles for determining the allowable annual cut for the area and presents an accounting of the factors and the rationale used in making that determination. These factors include the role of the base-case timber supply forecast, the existing forest inventory, the expected rate of forest growth, the land base contributing to timber harvesting, regeneration delay, areas not satisfactorily restocked, silvicultural systems, decay and wastage, integrated resource management objectives, harvest flow, dependence on the forest industry, and timber processing facilities. The appendix contains relevant sections of provincial forestry legislation.

Metro waterfront environmental study : a background report

Prepared by: Jonathan Kauffman...et al. Toronto : Metropolitan Toronto Planning Dept., 1992. 100 p. : Maps, Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02128 (2 fiche)

This study is a diagnostic analysis of the Metropolitan Toronto waterfront's state of health, concentrating on key ecological elements and their interrelationships. Research has been limited to secondary sources and to those river valleys for which data are readily available (the Rouge, Don, and Humber), with emphasis on natural systems as opposed to engineering considerations. The study first reviews waterfront ecosystem initiatives to date (local, provincial, and federal), the definition and evaluation of ecosystem health, and waterfront ecosystem objectives. It then evaluates the current state of waterfront health, examining ecosystem variables such as water quality and wildlife abundance, as well as physiographic variables. The components of Metro's biotic ecosystems are discussed in terms of aquatic species and plant communities, and locations of habitat requiring protection or regeneration are identified. Finally, the study proposes five new ecological strategies for incorporation into official plans. These strategies relate to aquatic and terrestrial habitat, hydrology, implementation, and information management. An appendix contains a long discussion of indicators of environmental health.

The Metropolitan Waterfront Plan is designed to achieve a waterfront (stretching from Etobicoke Creek to the Rouge River) that is healthy, vibrant, and publicly accessible. This plan document comprises a series of objectives and policies that form a comprehensive planning strategy for the waterfront. Introductory chapters examine the importance of the waterfront, its fragility as a natural resource, the pressures and challenges that must be addressed in the plan, the future of the waterfront and the intended future achievements of the plan, the principles on which the plan is based, and the plan objectives. The next five chapters set out waterfront policies in the following areas: the waterfront green space system; waterfront access and movement; development and economic vitality; key destinations along the waterfront; and plan implementation. Describes trends in the housing market and housing stock of Metropolitan Toronto and the Greater Toronto Area (GTA) over 1986-91, with relevant statistics, intended to give a general portrait of housing change, to describe what this means in social terms, and to provide some knowledge on the intensification occurring in Metro Toronto. Four main topics are covered: the quantity and type of housing built in various parts of the GTA, and changes in existing housing stock; trends in the rental sector, including sources of supply, condominium rentals, and social housing; how these trends relate to social change, including type of household (family or non-family), housing tenure, immigration, and ageing population; and housing costs, along with how these have changed in the late 1980s, housing affordability, and market and regulatory trends in rental housing.

MICROLOG 97-02176 (1 fiche)

Summarizes a study conducted with the objectives of exploring the planning rationale of a transportation gateway in the Mimico/Park Lawn Road area of Etobicoke, establishing a framework for evaluation of gateway benefits, and evaluating alternative gateway locations. A gateway, as defined for this study, is a facility which brings together a number of different modes of travel to provide improved accessibility to rapid transit. The area considered for alternative locations of the current Mimico GO station is along rail trackage south of the Queen Elizabeth Way between Royal York Road and the Humber Loop. Alternatives considered include retaining the current GO station, upgrading the station to accommodate a gateway, and relocating the station to one of three possible alternative sites. Evaluation of alternatives was assessed according to such criteria as development potential, transportation demand and accessibility, connectivity with other modes, and railroad engineering factors.

The original purpose of the project described in this report was to streamline the field service operations of the Ontario Mines & Minerals Division to increase customer satisfaction and attract investment to the province. The project has developed an operating model for streamlined, cost-effective field service operations responsive to client needs (current and projected) and competitive with those in other jurisdictions. The project included evaluation of the current state of field operations (the resident geologist program, mining recorder program, and mineral development program), consultations with customers and Division staff, and redesign of the field operations. The redesign included identification of core customers and services, core competencies, and levels of service required, and development of a location model to determine where field offices would be required. Current systems of electronic service delivery were also assessed and recommendations made for implementing wider access. The appendix includes a discussion of the pros and cons of map staking of mining claims as an alternative to the current system of physical staking in the ground.

Examines the performance of M1 (the monetary aggregate whose components are currency outside banks plus demand deposits at banks) in an indicator model of inflation over time horizons as long as 16 quarters into the future. The model used is based on the P* model of inflation proposed by Hallman, Porter, and Small (1989). That model suggests that the main factors influencing inflation are past values of inflation, past cumulative growth of M1, the M1 gap, and an output gap generated as the deviation of real gross domestic product from its linear-quadratic trend. The paper presents background on the P* model and uses a modified version of the model to generate empirical results.

The Ontario moose population is a valuable asset to the province, and there is good evidence that current moose population levels are well below habitat-limited population potential. Resources can be effectively managed only with an inventory of stock and an assessment of stock use. For moose, the inventory normally consists of population surveys, the subject of this report. The purpose of the report is to provide a minimum framework for a moose population inventory system that will provide only essential information, at the most reasonable cost, for input into decision support systems for effective management of moose harvests. It discusses the economic impacts of moose hunting, principles of moose population monitoring, aerial survey aircraft availability and safety, perceived needs for surveys, priority setting for re-establishment of a 3-year cycle of surveys, logistic considerations, and future surveys.

Describes a geochemical survey centred on the Cal Graphite Mine in Butt Township, Ontario, which straddles the western boundary of Algonquin Provincial Park. The mine, which operated 1990-94, has been identified as a source of acid drainage and elevated metal concentrations in water. Survey objectives were to: determine the natural background geochemical conditions of the geology and landscapes in the region; characterize all geochemical and anthropogenic inputs to the environment; and initiate a database of baseline geochemical data for the region. Investigators collected water and sediment samples from streams and lakes at 132 sites and soil/humus samples from 43 sites. Quaternary geology was mapped and overburden sampled to aid in identification of possible natural sources of acidity and metals in the area, and acid-generating potential of major rock types was estimated through acid-base accounting procedures. The sampling and analytical strategy was designed to determine the natural background conditions in the region. The impact of mining activity was then assessed in relation to the baseline data and the natural geochemical signatures of undeveloped mineral occurrences in the area.

By Darren Eurich, John Spriggs and Julia Taylor. Regina : Saskatchewan Agriculture & Food, ADF, 1995. vii, 106 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02151 (2 fiche)

The objectives of this study are to assess the factors that are important in determining countervailing duty actions on farm commodities by the United States, and to assess what these factors mean for the design of a new safety net program (such as the Net Income Stabilization Account or NISA type) in Saskatchewan. The first part describes US countervail law and the US countervail process with emphasis on the question of specificity. Some past countervail cases in which specificity has figured are discussed. The second part uses statistical analysis to assess what roles, if any, are played by the specificity criteria and US political lobbying in countervail actions. The third phase of the study assesses what the results of the analysis mean for the design of future farm income safety nets in Canada by focusing on the parameters of a new Saskatchewan safety net program. Three features are identified that may conflict with US specificity criteria.

Letang Inlet is a marine tidal inlet about 15 kilometres long, located on the New Brunswick shore of the Bay of Fundy. Human activities affecting the inlet waters include aquaculture, fish processing, and sewage treatment, all of which can discharge wastes that can alter ambient nutrient and dissolved oxygen. This report presents results of three surveys that measured distributions of nutrients (silicate, phosphate, nitrate, nitrite, ammonia) and dissolved oxygen, along with associated hydrographic parameters, in the inlet during summer 1994. Sampling and analytical methods are also described.

This study had the following objectives: to review progress and the extent of implementation of recommendations made in a 1982 report on fire protection in the Northwest Territories; to provide updated information on various items relevant to fire protection in the Territories; to provide information on the technology of automated sprinkler systems and their current and potential future use in the Territories; and to analyse the relative influence of various elements impacting on the quality of fire prevention and control. Changing needs and practices in the 1980s and 1990s relevant to fire protection are also reviewed, including development of buildings and housing, social developments, and municipal services. Improvements in fire protection systems and fire loss statistics in the Territories are noted, and options for improvement of fire protection are assessed. Recommendations are made for actions by various agencies involved with provision of fire prevention and control.

The Oak Ridges Moraine, a prominent upland area in south central Ontario, is a significant and sensitive glacial landform of importance to natural habitat, water resources, and landscape aesthetics. This document presents a draft strategy developed to ensure the maintenance and enhancement of the ecological integrity of the Moraine ecosystem within the Greater Toronto Area. The strategy defines three interconnected natural systems that together will protect, and possibly enhance, the ecological integrity of the Moraine: a natural heritage, water resource, and landform conservation system. Elements, objectives, and policies relevant to each system are described. Other sections of the strategy cover future improvements to the ecological framework; responsibility for land management and protection; land and resource use policies with regard to urban growth, resource extraction, non-renewable resource use, recreation, and public utilities; cultural heritage resource policies; the Moraine trail system; and implementation of the strategy. Otolith techniques for identifying and discriminating between pond-cultured and indigenous walleye, Stizostedion vitreum, from the natural environment

Aquatic Ecosystems Research Section ; in contribution to Percid Community Synthesis ; John M. Casselman. Picton, ON : The Section, 1995. II, 18 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02061 (1 fiche)

Calcified structures offer a mechanism for recognizing specific attributes associated with individual fish through differences in growth patterns and characteristics. The most practical and reliable calcified-structure technique for identifying and separating cultured and indigenous walleye from the natural environment involves detection and quantification of a stress-induced mark in otolith microzonation. This technique provides a reliable method not only for recognizing reductions in growth associated with stress-induced handling and stocking marks, but also for determining the age in days of young walleye. This report describes the general technical aspects of walleye otolith interpretation procedures; discusses the validity of the method, including affecting factors; and makes recommendations for reducing the variance and bias associated with the method, in addition to refining and improving procedures.

An Overview of mentoring and existing mentoring programs : a report

By Julie Clapham. Victoria : Office of the Businesswomen's Advocate ; Leadership & Management Development Council of British Columbia, 1996. 74 p.
MICROLOG 97-02323 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this study is to provide a basis on which to develop an effective strategy for promoting mentorship among entrepreneurs in British Columbia. It begins with a definition of mentoring and an overview of existing mentorship programs in both Canada and the United States. The programs are reviewed under four basic model structures: one-on-one matching, advising/counselling arrangements, group mentoring, and electronic mentoring. Finally, considerations in designing a mentoring program are discussed, including the importance of mentor training, monitoring of mentor/protégé pairs, program funding and administration, sources for mentor pools, and common problems encountered by mentoring programs. The appendix contains samples of mentoring program documents.

Paleoseismology and seismic hazards, southwestern British Columbia

The historical and geological record indicate that the earthquake hazard in south-western British Columbia is relatively high. This bulletin presents results of a major paleoseismological investigation consisting of several related interdisciplinary studies that extend the seismic record of the region into prehistory. Three introductory sections contain background material on the region's geologic and tectonic setting, earthquake sources, historical seismicity, and research methods used. This is followed by four sections summarizing paleoseismological research on the following indicators of possible past earthquakes: sea level changes, tsunamis and their deposits, liquefaction of ground, and landslides. The final sections are concerned with seismic hazards (ground motion, ground rupture, subsidence and flooding, tsunamis and seiches, liquefaction, landslides) and analysis of risk and recurrence of earthquakes.

Fundamental questions of what may be the acceptable scope or criteria for introducing countervailing-like duties on environmental grounds, and the practical problems with using such an instrument to encourage a change in a foreign country's policies, have not been fully explored. One important question that we will address more fully in his paper is: should generally available subsidies, with the important caveat that there is a significant environmental impact, be candidates for countervailing-like duties? The key notion of the question is that of applying a trade instrument to encourage adjustment of subsidization practices that have detrimental environmental effects and affect a tradable good.

This publication presents guidelines that set out the kinds of benefits to be achieved through the development and operation of territorial parks, of which five types are provided for in the Territorial Parks Act. The publication provides background on the context for a parks policy, including Aboriginal rights, costs and benefits, public consultation, and agency collaboration. It then sets out goals for territorial parks related to tourism, employment and business opportunities, cultural resources and community well-being, recreation, conservation, and sustainable development. It also discusses guidelines for park safety and public services, park revenue generation, the park establishment process, a park system plan, location and size of parks, park management plans, park zoning and land use, and public involvement in park establishment.

Natural regeneration of black spruce through the protection of advance growth offers the potential to integrate restocking with harvesting. This note explores the potential to identify stands having abundant advance growth by using aerial photograph interpretation. It describes an investigation using black and white aerial photographs of three classes of stands (having high, medium, or low advance growth) and multiple discriminant analysis to determine whether any attributes of the photographs were useful in discriminating advance growth stocking classes. Based on the results, an aerial photograph interpretation key was developed and is presented. Notes are provided for using the key to differentiate peatlands and peatland transitions from uplands, to determine stand composition and canopy closure, and to differentiate peatland site types. Management applications of the key are also outlined. CA FO ND ON PR SC

A Proposed quality education agenda : a synthesis of views

Fredericton : Dept. of Education, 1996. 37 p. French ed. (Un Projet d'éducation de qualité...) : 97-01871/1. Summary (4 p.) laid in.
MICROLOG 97-01877 (1 fiche)

A discussion paper released by the New Brunswick Ministry of Education in 1996 drew nearly 6,000 responses from the public concerning 14 objectives for the province's education system. This paper summarizes the feedback received, also briefly reviews some current professional literature and developments, and provides additional information that should give a broader view of the issues involved. Responses are summarized under the 14 objectives grouped in three categories: a sharper focus for the education system (literacy, curriculum, homework, technology, use of school time), higher expectations (standards, kindergarten, enrichment and remedial programs), and greater accountability and responsibility (reporting, parental involvement, disruptive students, integration, harassment and abuse). Appendices include lists of graduation requirements and elective subjects.

Reason and compassion : the enabling society and its strategic implications for social housing policy in Canada, vol. I Ekos Research Associates Inc. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1996. viii, 82 p. : Bibl.

MICROLOG 97-02203 (2 fiche)

Governments have developed an interest in dealing with pressures on existing and proposed social programs. Two factors driving this interest are: the limits on the extent to which they can tax their citizens, and the evidence that existing programs are inefficient and have unintended incentives or outcomes. One response to these issues is the concept of changing government programs which may encourage dependence to one which encourages adaptation and independence. These developments have been grouped under the heading 'the enabling society.' This report presents an analysis and discussion of the roles that housing policy can play in the enabling society, beginning with an overview of social security issues and a definition of enablement. It then raises the issue of individual and social values, exploring the assumptions underlying an enabling philosophy and relating those assumptions to larger core values of importance to Canadians. Existing social housing assistance in Canada is reviewed to determine to what extent it might be called enabling. The final chapter examines the implications arising from the development of specific enabling programs. Three examples are provided for discussion.

Enabling programs provide tailored, targeted support within partnerships to enhance self-sufficiency and independence. This document contains supporting documentation for a companion volume that examined possible impacts of enabling programs on housing policy. The documentation examines initiatives with enabling characteristics in the international context, Great Britain, the United States, and Canada, largely with reference to social security and various housing programs. It also describes the methods used to develop a definition of enablement and discusses equality of opportunity versus quality of outcome. The latter is included because some have suggested that enablement involves a shift from outcome measures (such as income distribution) to measures of opportunity (for example, that appropriate job training is available).

Provides an overview of recent progress pertaining to biotechnology in forestry in Canada. The first section contains papers on the more technical aspects of biotechnology: conifer somatic embryogenesis, germplasm preservation, genetic transformation, tree nutrient storage, tree seed development, tree growth and development, and organelle molecular biology. The second section pertains to organisms associated with trees, such as root symbionts, weeds, pathogens, insects, and their control agents. The third section emphasizes biotechnology use within forest ecosystems, including the preservation of genetic diversity, environmental impact and its assessment, and the legal dimensions of biotechnology research.

Recreational fishery catch statistics from license stub returns, 1966-93, for various freshwater and anadromous fish species of Nova Scotia

Prepared for Fisheries Institute of Nova Scotia and Nova Scotia Department of Fisheries ; by ASE Consultants Inc. Halifax : The Dept., 1995. vi, 100 p. : Ill.
MICROLOG 97-02378 (2 fiche)

Summarizes Nova Scotia sport catch statistics collected from general fishing license stub data, 1966-83. Data from resident and non-resident anglers are examined to determine the total catch of each species and the catch per angler for each species. Effort data collected 1990-93 were used to calculate the catch per angler-day for each species. The methodology used in analyzing the data is described and data are presented as tables and graphs. Species covered in the report include trout, Atlantic salmon, smallmouth bass, shad, striped bass, white and yellow perch, and chain pickerel.

Recreational fishery catch statistics from the Logbook Program 1987-93, for various freshwater and anadromous fish species of Nova Scotia

ASE Consultants Inc. Halifax : Dept. of Fisheries ; Fisheries Institute of Nova Scotia, 1995. ix, 195 p.
MICROLOG 97-02287 (3 fiche)

The Nova Scotia Logbook Program was targeted at anglers who kept accurate records of their fishing trips and who wanted to share this information. Information requested in logbooks included species sought, lake or stream fished, total hours of fishing, species caught, fish characteristics such as length and weight, and number and species of fish released. This report summarizes recreational fishery catch statistics collected in the Logbook Program from 1987 to 1993. This includes the number of participants, hours fished, species captured, percent released, size of fish caught, catch per angler per season, and catch per angler-day. Data are collated by province, by county, and by watershed. Key species examined are brook trout, brown trout, rainbow trout, smallmouth bass, American shad, striped bass, white perch, and yellow perch.

Dans les conversations courantes, on évoque facilement les difficultés de la famille à l'heure actuelle. Elle est à la fois malmenée et à la fois sous-estimée, dit-on. Elle représente malgré tout une valeur partagée, notamment par les jeunes. Mais, il y a une réalité dont on parle peu ouvertement : celle des séparations et des divorces qui atteignent au Québec une proportion plus élevée qu'ailleurs dans des sociétés comparables. Ce document présente un recueil de réflexions sur la stabilité des couples-parents. Les points qui y sont abordés sont les suivants : comment se présente cette stabilité? qu'en disent les principaux acteurs? y a-t-il des solutions? et, encore une question d'équilibre.

Site index is traditionally chosen across North America as a primary measure of forest site quality, as a predictor of tree height growth patterns, and as a predictor of overall height and volume growth rates for forest stands. This technical note presents site index curves (total height versus breast height age) for red and white pine, as derived from stem height analysis data from trees sampled in south central Ontario. It also includes site index tables, information on site index model development and instructions for use of the tables.

Le rapport-synthèse présente d'abord un aperçu du contexte dans lequel les différentes interventions gouvernementales reliées à la protection des cours d'eau du Québec ont évolué. La problématique reliée à l'évaluation des substances toxiques des effluents des établissements industriels visés est décrite. L'approche méthodologique utilisée et la solution développée afin d'intégrer les charges des substances toxiques caractérisées sont présentées. Les méthodes de suivi de la qualité des effluents sont définies par la suite. Les principales réalisations et mesures d'assainissement, de même que les résultats de la réduction des rejets obtenus de 1988 à 1995, déterminés à partir de l'indice Chimiotox et des paramètres de suivi, sont finalement présentés pour les 50 établissements industriels prioritaires de PASL.

This synthesis report first presents an overview of the context shaping the various measures taken by the government to protect Quebec's waterways. The problems at issue in assessing the toxic substances in effluents from these industrial plants are described next, followed by the methodology selected and the ChimioTox Index, an index developed to solve the problem of combining loadings of the toxic substances characterized. Methods of monitoring effluent quality are then defined. Lastly, the main accomplishments and cleanup measures, along with the discharge reduction results obtained from 1988 to 1995, as determined by the ChimioTox index and by monitoring parameters, are presented for all 50 Action Plan priority industrial plants.

Describes the methodology and results of a numerical modelling study conducted to gain an understanding of regional groundwater flow conditions at the Atikokan Research Area, north-western Ontario. Focuses on an evaluation of the possibility that fluid viscosity might vary significantly with total dissolved solids (TDS) because pore fluids in the Area range from fresh to briny. Section 1 describes a modification to an empirical fluid viscosity-solute concentration equation for use in estimating viscosity from field-observed TDS data. Section 2 describes modifications to the fluid viscosity-equation of state in the MOTIF finite element code to account for solute concentration, along with changes to the fluid density equation. In section 3, variable density and viscosity groundwater flow in the Area is analysed with the MOTIF code, showing effects of varying boundary conditions.

As the first part of a set of volumes examining the evolution of the relationship among Aboriginal peoples and the Canadian government, this volume studies that relationship from the earliest times to the present and examines policies that have affected that relationship. The volume begins with a demographic profile of Canada's current Aboriginal population and then reviews the history of government/Aboriginal relations in four stages: before European contact, the early contact and co-operation period, displacement and assimilation, and the latest stage of negotiation and renewal of the relationship. The volume then examines false assumptions involved in the government/Aboriginal relationship and discusses four policies negatively affecting this relationship: The Indian Act, the residential schools policy, the relocation of Aboriginal communities, and the treatment of Aboriginal military veterans. The volume ends with principles for building the foundations of a renewed relationship.

This volume investigates social and cultural issues related to Aboriginal people in Canada, and proposes solutions to problems that compromise their quality of life. Subjects specifically addressed include the family (children, violence, barriers to change, Aboriginal-centred solutions, family law); health and healing, including physical, social, emotional, and community health, and an Aboriginal health and healing strategy; housing (housing conditions, community services, housing on and off reserves, community revitalization); education for children, youth, teachers, and adults, the role of elders, Aboriginal educational institutions, education for self-government; and arts and heritage, including language, historic sites, media, publishing, and visual and performing arts). Recommendations are made to address urgent social concerns, progress toward Aboriginal self-government, and stimulate adaptation of mainstream institutions.

Understanding of the goals and aspirations of Aboriginal Canadians requires recognition of their diversity. This volume examines Aboriginal issues from the perspectives of diverse elements of the Aboriginal population. The chapter on women's perspectives looks at the evolution of Indian policy and its effect on women, women's health and social services, and the family. The chapter on elders' perspectives reviews the Aboriginal and Western intellectual traditions and the role of elders in the modern world. The chapter on youth perspectives reviews the reality of Aboriginal youth, their need for whole health and empowerment, and a proposed Aboriginal youth policy. A chapter on the Métis looks at their history, culture, relations with government, and rights. The final two chapters give perspectives of Aboriginals in the north (political development, environmental stewardship, the economy) and urban areas (social programs, cultural identity, women, governance, demographics, socio-economic conditions).

An introductory chapter to this document discusses laying the foundations of a renewed relationship between Canadians, their governments & the Aboriginal peoples. It looks at recognition of nations, the treaty process, lands & resources, a Canada-wide framework agreement, social issues & structural changes, dimensions of social change, and federal-provincial-territorial contributions. The next chapter discusses economic disparities, government expenditures & the cost of the status quo followed by a discussion of the Commission's strategy as a good investment (improved economic opportunity & living conditions, human resources development, institutional development). Public education is also discussed (dialogue, cross-cultural communication, stakeholder groups - religious, municipal, labour union, aboriginal organizations, media, symbols & special occasions, federal & provincial governments & their agencies. Lastly it considers constitutional amendment including the amending formula & specific suggestions (Senate, House of Commons, Aboriginal House of Parliament, Supreme Court, new provinces, entrenchment of principles & recommendations, equalization & regional disparities).

Surveys the current scholarly interests of all program students in the Dept. of Sociology in Education at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. The need for the survey arose from faculty concern to have a better overall picture of student interests in the Department, and the results will provide part of the basis for faculty renewal appointment planning. Three main kind of information were supplied by the 82 respondents: the general topical or sub-disciplinary areas of scholarship they are interested in pursuing within the Department; the general or specific topic of their planned thesis or research paper; and their degree program and current status.

Alberta. Office of the Ethics Commissioner. Edmonton : The Office, 1996. 1, 136 p.
MICROLOG 97-02268 (2 fiche)

Presents findings of an inquiry into matters relating to Alberta Premier Ralph Klein's activities undertaken during a 1994 trade mission to Hong Kong and China. During that mission, the Premier attended a private dinner for the president of Multi-Corp, a company in which the Premier's wife was a shareholder and which shortly thereafter signed a $26 million deal with Chinese officials. Specific matters investigated include: whether the Premier breached the Conflict of Interests Act by participating in any decision that would further the private interest of his wife in Multi-Corp; whether the Premier used his office or powers to influence a decision by the province to further that private interest; and whether the Premier used or communicated information gained during the trade mission to further that interest. The investigation involved questioning and obtaining statutory declarations from the people involved, including the Premier and the Multi-Corp president. The appendix contains copies of the statutory declarations.

The purpose of the work described in this report was to study the response of lithium fluoride thermoluminescent detectors (LIF TLDs) to caesium-137 and cobalt-60 gamma rays under well-defined conditions. Investigators irradiated the TLDs in holders made of either Lucite or aluminium, as well as in a commercially available badge holder. For the Lucite and aluminium holders, the effect on the TLD response of photon attenuation and scattering was estimated by varying the holder wall thickness. Response per unit air kerma of each TLD was measured and results are presented as ratios between measured and true air kerma. The results indicate the importance of considering the effect of the holder on the apparent energy response of TLDs.

On étudie dans ce document la dynamique de la réaffectation des emplois dans le secteur canadien de la fabrication. Pour cela, on examine le régime et l'ampleur des créations d'emplois, des pertes d'emplois et du renouvellement de l'emploi en raison de la croissance et du déclin de quelques entreprises, ainsi que de la création et de la disparition d'autres. On y étudie aussi comment l'effet des influences cycliques, par opposition aux influences structurelles, a évolué dans le temps. Enfin, on examine la question de savoir si le régime et l'ampleur du renouvellement de l'emploi varient selon la branche d'activité et les régions, et si les différences éventuelles dépendent des différences de sensibilité cyclique de la création et de la disparition des emplois, et de la mesure dans laquelle il y a une restructuration.

Investigates the dynamics of job reallocation in the Canadian manufacturing sector by examining the pattern and magnitude of job gain, job loss, and total job turnover due to growth and decline of some firms, and entry and exit of other firms. Also examines how the effect of cyclical as opposed to structural influences on job turnover have changed over time. Finally, the paper investigates whether the pattern and magnitude of job turnover differ across industries and across regions, and whether the differences are caused by differences in cyclical sensitivity of job creation and job destruction or in the extent to which restructuring is taking place.

Revitalizing Long Branch : final report on the Long Branch Mainstreet Pilot Project

Long Branch Mainstreet Pilot Project Work Group (Metropolitan Toronto, Ont.). Toronto : The Work Group, 1995. 271 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02131 (3 fiche)

The project described in this report is a step toward revitalizing the east end of the Long Branch mainstreet, extending along Lake Shore Boulevard from 22nd to 31st Street. The key issues addressed in the project are: regulations affecting mainstreet development, especially those relating to parking, zoning, and the Ontario Building Code; the form and function of the right-of-way; the redevelopment of City-owned properties on and adjacent to the mainstreet; and means of attracting new businesses and customers while retaining existing ones. Three options for reconfiguring the Boulevard are evaluated, and four basic strategies are identified to improve the area's economic viability. The appendices include a report detailing 41 ways to revitalize the mainstreet; the project funding application and project description; and a history of the Long Branch mainstreet.

Roles and responsibilities in the British Columbia safety system : a discussion paper

British Columbia. Safety Systems Review. Victoria : The Review, 1996. 36 p. On title page: A Government-private sector initiative.
ISBN 0-7726-3065-8
MICROLOG 97-02337 (1 fiche)

The British Columbia Safety Systems Review is a project that is seeking ways to foster a continuation of the current levels of public safety in the province's safety system. The term 'safety system,' as used in the review, encompasses the construction of buildings and structures; the fitting of buildings and structures with electrical and mechanical equipment; the design, manufacture, and operation of such structures as pipelines and railways; the operation of safety-related support systems such as fire safety, certification, and operator training; and the bonding, insurance, and warranty of products and services. This paper presents the views and observations of about 500 public and private sector participants who provided input to the Review. The following issues are covered: principles of the safety system; opportunities for change in roles and responsibilities in such matters as standardization, enforcement, liability, and legislation; and roles and responsibilities in specific areas of the safety system. Includes glossary.

The intent of this paper is to provide a background on the process by which British Columbia's safety system has evolved, the process being used in a current review of that system, and the pertinent issues at hand. It first describes the province's current safety system, which encompasses the construction of buildings and structures; the fitting of buildings and structures with electrical and mechanical equipment; the design, manufacture, and operation of such structures as pipelines and railways; the operation of safety-related support systems such as fire safety, certification, and operator training; and the bonding, insurance, and warranty of products and services. The paper then discusses the system's evolution and current challenges which constitute the rationale for a review. Subsequent sections discuss the need for review, the progress made to date, the review project structure and terms of reference, and the roles and responsibilities work groups representing each of the nine areas of the safety system review. Includes glossary.

Floating straw covers on earthen manure storages have proven effective at controlling manure odours, but a more permanent floating cover would be desirable. The project described in this report attempted to germinate a variety of seeds in the floating straw layer and establish a living cover with a root mat that would extend the life of the cover. A small seed spreader was developed and used to spread seed in strips into a number of different media, including dry straw, damp straw just above the manure surface, saturated straw, and liquid manure. Types of seeds included wheat, barley, rye, oats, canary seed, and grass seed.

By Dianne C. Winkelman, John J. McKinnon and Sheila M. Schmutz. Regina : Agriculture Development Fund, 1996. 19 p. : Ill.
MICROLOG 97-01938 (1 fiche)

It is proposed that variations in specific genes may be responsible for differences in beef cattle growth and carcass traits. The research reported in this document was carried out to identify variant forms of candidate genes for growth and carcass traits by restriction fragment length polymorphism analysis and to test genotypes of variant genes for associations with growth and carcass traits. The investigation involved 195 pure-bred bulls of five breeds which were genotyped for collagens as well as for a pituitary-specific transcription factor polymorphism. Genotypes were tested for associations with traits including carcass weight, fat depth, cutability, marbling score, carcass grade, and percentage of bone, lean, and fat. The results indicate the possibility of using candidate genes as part of the selection criteria in beef cattle to improve yield through changes in ribeye area and fat deposition patterns.

One problem confronting eel farmers is the highly skewed sex ratios of cultured eels in favour of males, which achieve a smaller size prior to maturation than do females. In contrast, sex ratios of wild eel populations in eastern Canada are strongly biased toward females. This suggests an environmental, rather than genetic, control of sex determination. This report describes a study examining the influence of a period of low temperature during the first year in culture on sex determination in the American eel (Anguilla rostrata).

Speaking out : final report of the new social assistance legislation consumer focus group project

By Josephine Grey. Toronto : The Group, 1992. xxiii, 241 p. Cover title: Advisory Group on New Social Assistance Legislation, consumer focus group project : final report.
MICROLOG 97-02026 (3 fiche)

Describes a project that consisted of a series of focus groups with consumers of social assistance in Ontario. The purpose of the focus groups was to obtain consumer opinions and ideas about how the social assistance system currently operates and how it could be improved; and to access both the existing network of organized consumers, and other consumers who might otherwise not become in-involved, in an ongoing way regarding the establishment of a council of consumers and social assistance reform. Half of the focus groups consisted of a cross section of people who had received general welfare or family benefits; seven groups were with immigrants and refugee claimants; six focus group sessions and a series of interviews were conducted with people with disabilities; and four groups focused on specific issues including employment and training. Issues discussed include adequacy of payments, service delivery, incentives to work, information access, child support, accountability, and efficiency.

Stand tending impacts on environmental indicators

Prepared for Silviculture Practices Branch, B.C. Ministry of Forests ; prepared by Julie A. Greenough and Werner A. Kurz. Victoria : Forest Renewal BC ; Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement on Forest Resource Development: FRDA II, 1996. viii, 58 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7726-2943-9
MICROLOG 97-02380 (1 fiche)

Stand tending refers to a variety of forest treatments that can be used to enhance timber production, including pruning, fertilizing, and pre-commercial and commercial thinning. Stand tending changes the structure of a forest stand and can have both negative and positive effects on habitat and wildlife. Quantitative data on these environmental costs and benefits are needed to optimize the level of investment in stand tending and to direct that investment where it will to the most good. This study uses the Tree and Stand Simulator (TASS) to forecast the changes in stand structure following stand tending. Environmental indicators sensitive to changes in stand structure were identified and their structural dependencies were quantified, then coupled to TASS output to show how the indicators were expected to change over time under 89 different stand tending regimes. Results presented indicate the environmental trade-offs associated with stand tending and also the dependence of net effects of stand treatment not only on stand conditions after treatment but also on the rotation length chosen with that treatment. Two examples are provided to show how stand-level environmental indicators can contribute to the landscape-level analyses required for management planning for the maintenance of biodiversity.

As a result of amendments to the British Columbia Municipal Act adopted in 1994, local governments can now enact a standards of maintenance bylaw to enforce basic levels of maintenance for rental accommodation. This booklet provides a guide for customizing the bylaw for a particular community and reviews what provincial legislation says about standards of maintenance. It then explains how to maintain standards for rental accommodation using provisions of the Residential Tenancy Act. A model standards of maintenance bylaw is included which local governments can alter, modify, or customize to suit their particular needs and circumstances.

The objective of this study was to assess the status of rainbow trout (Oncorhynchus mykiss) stocks in the tributaries of Canadian Lake Superior. The information in the study comes from a three-year cooperative program in which anglers sampled their own catches (kept or released), recorded length and sex of trout caught, and filled in fishing diaries. The fish samples collected enabled estimation of annual survival of mature fish, average size in catch, and number of years spent in the lake and stream. Results are presented in a format consisting of facing pages devoted to each of the 16 streams surveyed. The left-hand page contains information about the stream and the right-hand page presents data on year-class composition, length distribution, stream years, lake years at maturity, percent repeat spawners, size versus lake years, and sample size. Comments are also provided on the state of the trout population.

The concept of reurbanisation adopted in this study is a comprehensive one which examines the issue of residential intensification widely, in the context of the changing economy, social trends, environmental concerns, and urban issues. The purpose of the study is to provide a framework to effectively guide the processes of urban growth and intensification at the Metro Toronto level over the coming decades. After an introduction on the reurbanisation concept, the study traces the evolution of Metro's urban structure to identify factors critical in shaping the metropolis in the past and to identify particular characteristics of Metro's current urban form. It examines current trends and their implications for the reurbanisation process, and the issues of urban design and built form. It then forms a series of goals for reurbanisation and looks at how these goals can be achieved with regard to urban form, land use, density, and urban design.

This report provides Ontario Hydro's sustainable development/environmental performance over the past year. Discusses the five pillars of sustainable energy development: to continuously improve environmental practices; to promote energy and resource use efficiency; to increase the use of renewable energy; to integrate the environment into business decisions; and to provide social integrity. Includes activities surrounding international environment, the status of recommendations at year end, and provides an analytical framework of sustainable development indicators.

Taking action, a neighbourhood-initiated housing inspection program

By Nancy C. Higglitt and Glen Grismer. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1996. 148 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-02312 (2 fiche)

The purpose of this study was to increase understanding of resident-initiated action responding to neighbourhood decline by exploring how one group of residents (in the Riversdale neighbourhood of Saskatoon) tackled a problem. The study methods included document analysis and in-depth interviews with persons who participated in the project and others who observed it. It documents the evolution of the Riversdale Community Fire and Health Safety Program, which grew from concerns that the neighbourhood was suffering from neglect and that many residents were living in unacceptable conditions. The program was designed to identify fire and health hazards in area residents, and involved volunteers conducting door-to-door inspections. Results were forwarded to the fire department and serious problems were followed up by fire or public health inspectors. The study is accompanied by a handbook that contains guidelines for initiating a neighbourhood project

Teaching hospitals cost review

Manitoba. Health Advisory Network. Winnipeg : The Network, 1992. ill, 421 p. : ill., Bibl. At head of title: Report no. 12.
MICROLOG 97-01912 (5 fiche)

A task force of the Health Advisory Network initiated this study to determine whether the average operating costs per total patient day of Manitoba's two major teaching hospitals (Health Sciences Centre and St. Boniface General Hospital) substantially exceeded the Canadian teaching hospital average. Total costs per patient day and departmental costs of the two hospitals were compared with those of a peer group of 15 tertiary hospitals using Statistics Canada data. The secondary objective of the study was to identify departments in those hospitals whose costs exceeded the peer group average. The report begins with a detailed review of how the peer group hospitals were selected and of the adjustments made to enable fair comparisons. Principal departmental comparison results are then presented for nursing areas, outpatient services, and diagnostic and therapeutic services. Subsequent sections compare administrative and support costs, analyze overall costs and trends, discuss the need for utilization and operational reviews, draw conclusions concerning the cost variations observed, and make recommendations regarding cost efficiencies at the two Manitoba teaching hospitals. Appendices contain tables of comparative data and the responses from the two hospitals to an interim version of this report. A supplement contains a comparative cost study of the two hospitals.

This study is one of a series that examines how technology adoption affects the skills of workers. The paper uses survey data on the incidence of advanced technology adoption and matched panel data on plant characteristics such as wages, capital intensity, and size to examine the connection between technology use and the wage rates received by workers. Since higher wages are associated with higher skill levels, establishing a connection between technology use and wages reinforces the earlier findings.

A deer habitat supply model has been developed for use in central Ontario forest ecosystems. The model uses Forest Resources Inventory (FRI) data as input and estimates the supply of both winter and summer habitat. This report describes a test of the model, which was run using updated FRI data for four Central Region deer yards. Forage biomass was calculated for each habitat type under two different assumptions, and winter carrying capacity was determined assuming an average yard duration of 90 days and average deer weight of 47 kilograms. The investigators also configured data to test the correlation between summer forage biomass and summer carrying capacity as a test of the summer component of the model. Results include comparisons between reported habitat classification criteria and actual characteristics of habitat types from the four deer yards.

The purpose of this paper is to determine how closely the contents of several fields of the Canadian Heritage Information Network Humanities National Database correspond with the terminology of the Art & Architecture Thesaurus, and to examine the implications of such correspondence. The Database fields studied are: object name, object type, material, technique, culture, and school/style. Results of matching studies are presented which compare those fields with the Thesaurus 'Materials' facet, Processes and Techniques hierarchy, and 'Styles and Periods' facet. The study will determine the feasibility of using the Thesaurus as a vocabulary source or search tool for users of the Database, and may also provide the Thesaurus with candidate terms which could broaden its scope and user base, and make it a better source for Canadian museums.

Albert County is located in south-east New Brunswick and is characterized by an unspoiled natural environment and the aesthetic quality of its Bay of Fundy coastal and Caledonia highland areas. The county also has a rich heritage, presenting additional opportunities for tourism development. This report presents a long-term strategic action plan for developing Albert County tourism, based on concentrated nodes of development in Alma and Fundy National Park, Riverside-Albert, Hopewell Cape, The Rocks Provincial Park, and Hillsborough. Ten county-level initiatives are also recommended to co-ordinate services, increase the attractiveness of the area, retain its unspoiled nature, and support development of specific tourism opportunities. The implementation plan developed for the county identifies 89 specific actions and opportunities with a priority and implementation schedule, proposed implementing agencies and groups, and target markets. Appendices include an inventory of tourism resources, a summary of market research on the resident and non-resident tourist markets, and discussion of the county's infrastructure.

Presents two papers and summaries of seven other papers and six working group sessions at a forum on industrial land strategies. The first paper examines the current state of the Toronto-area regional economy from the perspective both of the recent recession and of longer-term changes, notably the decline of manufacturing-sector employment, rapid growth until 1989 of services-sector employment, and the increasing interdependence of the manufacturing industry and other economic sectors. Relevant statistics are included. The second paper explores the implications of contemporary industrial change on land use in south central Ontario. Topics of the summarized papers include the south central Ontario industrial real estate market, industrial land issues from the perspective of owners and land developers, revitalization of industrial areas, environmental challenges to the use of industrial land, and a new policy framework for industrial areas.

The industrial land strategy study was initiated to address the changing requirements for industrial land within Metropolitan Toronto. The purpose of this report is to provide an overview of the first phase of the study as well as a context for the development of regional industrial land strategies. The study area covers 9,515 square kilometres from Clarington (east of Oshawa) to Hamilton and Stoney Creek, and extends inland to include York Region and Kitchener/Waterloo. The report first reviews the current state and context of the industrial land situation, including information on employment, industrial floor space and building characteristics, and amount and status of industrial land development. It then examines public policies affecting industrial activity, including property taxes, development charges, official plans, and environmental regulations. Subsequent sections assess economic forces re-shaping the distribution of industrial activity, including trade liberalization, competition, and technological change; prospects for the industrial market in light of changing industry requirements; and the implications for industrial land in the study area. The appendix contains a summary of background reports to the study.

The preferred site is owned by the town and contains the currently operating landfill. This environmental assessment document describes the proposed landfill project, its rationale and alternatives, and the alternative methods of carrying out the project. Alternatives are compared on the basis of such criteria as design, economics, local geology, land use, surface water impacts, and social issues. Effects of the project on the natural, physical, social, cultural, and economic environment are also assessed. A summary of the advantages and disadvantages of the project is included.

In September 1993, the Ontario Ministry of Education introduced changes to the Grade 9 curriculum, resulting in destreaming and decrediting of Grade 9 students during their first year of high school. This study examines the impact of these changes on Grade 9 students in the Toronto Board, using a benchmark process. Previous records of Grade 9 achievement and outcomes prior to destreaming and decrediting were established and then compared to the characteristics of the new 1993-94 Grade 9 students. It was also decided to track students in each Grade 9 cohort for two years. Results are presented for three such cohorts with regard to transfer, dropout, or continuation; academic level; absenteeism; average credit accumulation; and total credit accumulation by the end of Grade 10.

A serious impediment to public support and adequate care for the elderly has been a lack of information regarding ageing and the highlighting of negatives in the media or stereotyping in advertising. In January 1987, the Elderly Services Branch undertook a public education program to foster positive attitudes to seniors and to encourage a practical response to their needs from every sector of the community. A major component of the program was a 60-second television commercial designed to challenge and change current negative stereotypes of the elderly. This report presents a study conducted to measure the impact of this campaign on public perceptions and attitudes toward seniors. Study methodology involved two sets of telephone interviews, one before and one after the campaign. Interviews were with both the general public and with professionals who work with the elderly. The results identify changes that occurred among respondents in the areas of advertising awareness, attitudes toward seniors, and attitudes toward (and involvement in) volunteer work with seniors. A storyboard of the television commercial and a copy of the interview questionnaire are appended.

This study examines the training needs of people who go to work as resource teachers, day nursery supervisors, and private home day care home visitors. The general objectives of the study were to determine the minimum training requirements of each of these positions; to identify the problems that were perceived to exist in relation to training; and to describe and analyze current legislation in Ontario for determining qualified staff to work in those positions. To achieve the first two objectives, a survey of practitioners in each position was conducted. Survey questionnaires were designed to obtain both factual, descriptive information about respondent training and experience and to elicit opinions and attitudes toward training requirements and the problems related to obtaining training. Most respondents had an Early Childhood Education (ECE) diploma and suggestions were made for modifications of ECE course content according to the functions of each position. The third objective was achieved by reviewing the Day Nurseries Act and its Regulation. ED ON PR SA SS

Presents results of an audit conducted to assess the extent to which the British Columbia Ministry of Transportation & Highways' trucking safety enforcement programs are designed and implemented to achieve trucking safety in a cost-effective manner, and to assess the extent to which the Ministry has examined whether those programs are the most effective alternatives in achieving trucking safety. The audit document begins with an overview of trucking safety in British Columbia and the three enforcement programs: fixed weigh scales, portable weigh scales, and carrier safety audits. It then presents audit findings and conclusions in two sections. The first section discusses program evaluation and analyzes output levels achieved in each enforcement program. This section also analyzes some outcome measurement information to provide insight into the state of trucking safety in the province. The second section reviews the extent to which the Ministry's Motor Vehicle Branch has assessed the relative effect of a range of factors to determine whether more efficient and cost-effective strategies exist to achieve trucking safety. A View of the forest : environmental stress, violent conflict and national security

By Robert T. Stranks. Ottawa : Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade, 1995. 39 p. : Bibl. (Policy staff paper / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; SP63A) (Economic papers / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; 95/05) French ed. (Stress environmental, conflits...) on the same fiche. MICROLOG 97-02185 (1 fiche)

The primary purpose of the paper is to identify and where possible elucidate the linkages between environmental stress and national security. In so doing, the paper attempts to contribute to our understanding of the forest (environment-national security in its broadest and almost all-encompassing sense), by more narrowly focusing on an individual tree (the environmental stress-violent conflict dimension of national security). A conceptual framework for facilitating the understanding of how environmental stress may contribute to violent conflict is set out in the paper. Most importantly, the framework serves to highlight: the case-specific nature of environmental stress-national security linkages; the fact that conflict may be intrastate or interstate; the large number of variables (such as population, technology and social factors) that influence causation; and the anecdotal nature of empirical evidence on causation.

MICROLOG 97-02036 (2 fiche)

The central theme of this report is how to address the challenge of providing high quality service for and directed by seniors, while maintaining equity and choice for women and other caregivers and still achieving an affordable system. A study team conducted interviews with service providers, academics, and others involved in various aspects of caregiving, carried out an extensive literature review, and held a workshop to explore alternative approaches to caregiving supports. Findings of the study are presented in sections covering: the current characteristics of senior care recipients and caregivers; the impact of informal caregiving on women; current policies and programs for caregivers; and a synopsis of major themes emerging from workshop discussions. The study proposes a model of support which implies collective responsibility for the support of seniors in the community.

Waste paper diversion project, fibre recovery unit : final report, Industrial Waste Diversion Program

Fibre Resource Recovery Corporation. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, Waste Reduction Branch, 1996. 22 p. : ill. ISBN 0-7778-5871-1
MICROLOG 97-01994 (1 fiche)

Describes a project to develop a method of collecting, sorting, grading, baling, and transporting waste paper in an efficient, maximized form to allow for economic distribution to domestic and foreign markets. The company carrying out the project, Fibre Resource Recovery Corp., had previously collected and recycled 30,000 tonnes/year of old corrugated cartons (OCC). The project would allow it to increase that amount to at least 150,000 tonnes/year and open additional markets for sale of OCC and other grades of waste paper, of which there were surplus amounts in Ontario. The technical aspects of the project included installation of state of the art hydraulic baling systems that would ensure maximum density of waste paper bales, thereby minimizing freight costs. Two types of balers were selected, one producing bales suited for North American truck transport and the other bales for container transport. Other aspects of the project involved development of material handling and shredding systems, supply sources, source separation systems, customer training, and market development. The impact of the project on paper diversion in Ontario and on job creation is also noted.

spaces, to a more theoretical academic study of urban parks, to experiential and anecdotal accounts. Common themes emerging in the papers include the marginalization of women and nature, lack of attention to needs of women and other marginalized groups, concerns about safety and sexual harassment, gender stereotyping in the urban environment, urban landscapes which are wasteful and dull and which disregard contemporary life styles and ecological imperatives, and the ability of a feminist perspective to view cities differently.

Working in partnership : Manitoba policy on First Nation government

Manitoba. Dept. of Northern Affairs. Native Affairs Secretariat. Winnipeg : The Secretariat, 1996. 10 p.
MICROLOG 97-02350 (1 fiche)

To prepare for future negotiations regarding Aboriginal self-government, Manitoba has been developing its own set of policy recommendations about the course of negotiations and a provincial position on the various issues involved. This policy document is organized in three parts. The first lists the principles underlying Manitoba's policy on First Nation government. The second outlines the assumptions that lie behind Manitoba's support of the self-government aspirations of the First Nations. The third part describes the policy on First Nation self-government, outlining six key issues that must be addressed during future negotiations on land-based self-government: the Manitoba role, extraordinary costs, Federal shifting of expenditures and responsibilities, financing, jurisdiction, and harmonization of laws and standards.

Presents findings and recommendations of a commission that consulted the Quebec public and examined submissions regarding the efficiency, fairness, and competitiveness of the provincial tax system and the financing of public services. Begins with a statement of basic principles of a tax system that could meet public aspirations. Chapter 2 reviews the Quebec tax environment, including the strengths and weaknesses of the provincial economy, and federal taxation. Chapter 3 discusses the problems with budget deficits and public debt, along with options to addressing the debt problem. Chapter 4 discusses the relationship between taxation and the public services it finances, and notes ways to improve the transparency of the tax system. Chapter 5 covers the effect of taxation on job creation, job insecurity, and competitiveness. Chapter 6 discusses taxation and wealth distribution, with specific focuses on tax treatment on various classes of taxpayers. Local taxation issues are covered in chapter 7, tax evasion and the underground economy in chapter 8, and tax system administration in the final chapter.

This report lays out a plan for reaching Manitoba's goal of reducing waste going to disposal by 50% by the year 2000, building on the experiences and accomplishments of the previous five years of the Waste Reduction and Prevention (WRAP) Strategy. It also reviews accomplishments achieved so far toward that goal, in such areas as support for recycling, implementing environmental stewardship, and developing a supportive regulatory framework. Quantitative measurements of waste reduction achievements are presented, giving data on such measures as recovery rates of designated recyclable materials. The strategy for 1996-2000 presented in the report includes the following elements: building on existing stewardship programs; establishing new waste minimization initiatives; and reducing waste at source.

Other Canadian Reference Sources

- Available from Micromedia -

Canadian Index

A comprehensive index providing access to nearly 100,000 citations each year from: nine major daily newspapers, over 200 Canadian trade and business periodicals, over 50 specialized Canadian trade magazines for which indexing is unavailable elsewhere, and more than 350 general periodicals.

KIOSK: CBCA

KIOSK: CBCA is a reference tool which combines a high quality indexing and abstracting database (CBCA) with direct access to the fulltext content of the articles indexed.

CBCA Fulltext

CBCA Fulltext provides fulltext access to Canadian periodicals and current affairs information, and incorporates the largest and most comprehensive subject guide to periodical literature. CBCA Fulltext allows searching on Windows, Macintosh, DOS and UNIX platforms.

CBCA OnDisc

CBCA OnDisc is the Knight Ridder CD-ROM version of the Canadian Index, giving you access to ten years of indexing. It includes every citation in the Canadian Index, plus thousands of informative abstracts which do not appear in the print edition.

KIOSK: Maclean's

Published in cooperation with Maclean's magazine, KIOSK: Maclean's contains every article and news report published by Canada's Weekly Newsmagazine over an eight year period.

CNI Clips: Press Clippings on Microfiche

CNI Clips is a unique service which provides the full text of more than 40,000 Canadian Press news stories and feature articles each year, and is delivered in a practical and economical microfiche format.

Canadian Education Index

Canadian Education Index covers more than 200 Canadian education periodicals, as well as reports and monographs from the educational research community across Canada. In addition, the Index covers report literature from government agencies, educational faculties and teachers' associations, and large school boards.

Canadian Education Index Thesaurus

Canadian Education Index Thesaurus is a bilingual controlled vocabulary of over 5,000 terms, developed for the indexing and retrieval of French or English-language material in Canadian education, and is an invaluable research aid for users of the Canadian Education Index.
